

THIN PEOPLE NEED BITRO- PHOSPHATE

Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve Force in Two Weeks'
Time in Many Instances

Take plain bitro-phosphate. It is the advice of these physicians to thin, delicate, nervous people who lack vim, energy and nerve force, and there seems to be ample proof of the efficacy of this preparation to warrant the recommendation. Moreover, if we judge from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, back and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft, curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance, the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which usually always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

Physicians and hospitals everywhere are now recognizing its merits by its use in every increasing quantities. Frederick Kelle, M.D., editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says: "Bitro-Phosphate should be prescribed by every doctor and used in every hospital to increase strength and nerve force and to enrich the blood."

Joseph D. Harrison, Former Visiting Specialist to North Eastern Dispensary, says: "Let those who are weak, thin, nervous, anemic, or run-down take a natural, unadulterated substance such as bitro-phosphate and you will soon see some astonishing results in the increase of nerve energy, strength of body and mind and power of endurance."

Bitro-Phosphate is made entirely of the organic phosphate compound referred to in the National Standard Dispensary as being a preparation which has recently acquired considerable reputation in the treatment of neurasthenia. The standard of excellence, strength and purity of its substance is beyond question. For every Bitro-Phosphate tablet is manufactured in strict accordance with the U. S. Pharmacopoeia test requirements. Bitro-Phosphate is therefore not a patent medicine and should not be confused with any of the secret, costly, so-called tonics or widely advertised "cure-alls."

CAUTION:—While Bitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for the relief of nervousness, general debility, etc., those taking it who do not desire to put on flesh should use extra care in avoiding fat-producing foods.

SERATHOL IS FINE FOR INDIGESTION SAYS DR. PARRISH

Sufferers from stomach acidity, indigestion, flatulence, gastritis and ailments arising from hyper-acidity of the stomach should understand that the human stomach is a delicate and intricate piece of machinery, therefore extreme care should be exercised to guard against grave complications, ulcers and serious intestinal trouble.

Instead of floundering with patent medicines, unknown drugs or resorting to the starving treatment, go to your druggist and get about a half dollar's worth of Serathol. There is nothing more effective in the treatment of these ailments and it can be obtained at very small cost.

Many a sufferer from these complaints has been agreeably surprised at the almost instantaneous relief and subsequent permanent benefit from its use. Serathol is a harmless and tasteless white powder, which neutralizes acid and stops food fermentation. In many cases of hyper-acidity a single dose produces almost magic effects.

Today's Health Hints

CONSTIPATION:—If people troubled with constipation would spend three to five minutes each day in taking a body laxative, exercising the muscles of the abdomen and at night before retiring take a little purified toilet, permanent and highly satisfactory results will soon follow. Drink plenty of fresh water, avoid strong purgatives and foods that have a constipating tendency and this simple plan cannot fail. The purified toilet is inexpensive and can be obtained from any good druggist. Advertisements.

LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

A VISIT TO THE CLUB.

John's exclamation of "silly ass," which I was almost sure that Karl Shepard overheard, embarrassed me greatly.

I would not have blushed because Karl kissed my hands, because I felt that he was enthusiastically trying to tell me that he was glad that I had recovered enough to be among friends. But John's exclamation put an entirely different aspect upon the act, and I felt wave after wave of hot blood rush to my face.

I grew more and more embarrassed as it seemed to me the entire company who had gathered around me, and who of course, had seen the salutation, was trying to read the motive behind his somewhat unconventional method of expressing his joy in my recovery.

Karl seemed to realize that he had embarrassed me, for as soon as possible he withdrew to the outer edge of the little circle and it was with gratitude on my part that I realized he was paying me the greatest deference in effacing himself.

I really had longed in my heart to see this gay company again, and I think that unconsciously I had expected just the wonderful spontaneity of the welcome they were giving me. I warned my heart. I could see that John was proud of me, although the brown was still upon his brow.

Complimented by Eddie.
But even John smiled when Eddie Milton edged his way through the group and said: "For the first time since I can remember, Mrs. Gordon, I wish I were younger than I am, and your kid brother!"

"You can play you're my kid brother, Eddie, if you want to," I said, and with that Eddie gave me a true school-boy hug and a kiss that resounded through the piazza.

I looked at John in apprehension, but this did not seem to worry him at all. He knew as I did, that Eddie Milton's kiss was just a bit of boyish bravado in the way of showing his affection for me.

"Are you as old as that?" said a soft, insinuating voice in my ear.

"As old as what?" I asked quickly, for at first I did not recognize the voice, but turned to face Elizabeth Moreland.

"I think I'll begin to call you Aunt Katherine," she said, as though that were the answer to my question.

"Oh," I said with sudden understanding, "you recognize that Eddie kissed me as he would his mother."

"No, I didn't either," was Eddie's earnestly boyish remonstrance.

"Well, at least you kissed me as some one very near and dear to you," I said, "and I want you to know that I shall be very proud to be the mother of a boy like your son."

"She's All Right," said John. "But she isn't so much older than you, boy, that I want you to make a practice of giving her a filial kiss."

I gave John a grateful look. He had risen to the occasion beautifully, but I just couldn't understand why he took Karl Shepard so seriously. Karl was his best friend until John married me, but since then I could see that they had been growing steadily apart.

I had been standing quite a long while and I must have grown pale, for very unostentatiously a big gray chair was moved up behind me and as I sank into its depths I did not have to turn my head to know that it was Karl who had paid me the little attention.

"Some one mentioned dinner and John said, 'Why, of course, we will stay to dinner.'"

"I don't believe I can, John," I whispered to him.

"Oh, yes you can, it will do you good."

I did not answer him, but I felt that I could not sit another moment among the merry throng.

The reaction had been overpowering and I just felt that I must get away from it all now.

As Well as Ever.

"Here, let me take you to the dressing room," he said. "With a little dolling up you will be as well as ever."

"I couldn't walk to the dressing room to save my life, John," I insisted.

"Won't you please take me home?"

"If I had known you were still an invalid I should not have brought you out here."

I closed my eyes to shut back the tears and Alice saved the day by coming up to say:

"I am sure that we are all tiring Katherine. John, we'll leave you while you help her into the car and take her home. Be sure, dear girl, that we'll all call upon you as soon as you will let us."

As Elizabeth Moreland left with the others I heard her say, and I am sure that John did, too:

"To think of John Gordon, of all men, being tied to an invalid!"

Tomorrow—An Uncomfortable Day.

D. AND R. G. WAREHOUSE IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Fire which apparently started on the roof, caused complete destruction of the Denver & Rio Grande company warehouse, between the Southern Pacific tracks and Pacific avenue on Twenty-first street. Employees of the company estimated the loss at $10,000.

A switch engine crew first sent in word regarding the fire but even before the fire department had been notified, the flames had gained considerable headway. The firemen were successful in checking the flames until the books and records had been rescued from the office in the east end of the building.

It was reported that a large quantity of goods had been stored in the warehouse.

MODERN LIGHTING

We have not by any means solved the problem of artificial lighting; but perhaps the indirect method is the best one we have hit upon so far. It may not be the most becoming sort of light, and in the living rooms lamps are placed on the tables, doublets prove most effective. But in a library or other room where an even light is needed the indirect sort is very good.

As yet the fixtures for this kind of light are rather expensive, but the woman who is clever about household tasks can make her own indirect lamp shade and thereby save a pretty penny. Almost any electric light fixture in the center of the ceiling can be used with such a shade and a local electrician can probably supply an inexpensive and at the same time attractive one for a small price. Have him put it in place and then take up the work yourself. You can buy a wicker shade frame sold expressly for indirect lighting at a price some place between $1.50 and $5, according to the size and quality you choose. Rajah silk is the kind sold for lining these wicker shades and this costs about $1.25 a yard. Two yards are ample for lining a shade thirty inches in diameter.

The size of the shade will determine the sort of lining to put in. The usual lining is shirred at the center and fulled very little around the edges. If the shade is circular in shape a long straight strip of cloth should be used. If the shade is hexagonal or octagonal in shape the silk must be cut into six or eight pieces in order to give the right shape along the outside. Once the silk is sewed in place, an opaque lining must be put in. White satin of a cheap quality will answer for this.

The shiny side of the satin should face upward toward the light so that this glazed surface will serve as reflector. If the shade is suspended several inches below the light, white glazed paper may be used for lining, but this must not be too near the lights, for fear of scorching.

The shade may be suspended from the bracket by silk cords or, if they look better, by dull gilt or silver ones. The shade should be near enough to the bracket to hide the bulbs used.

By sewing a small brass ring in each corner of the rug and slipping the ring over a tack, rugs can be kept down well, especially when the children are about.

SUB ROSA

Memories are precious things. When the age door closes many of the other avenues of approach to the outer world, the memory gate remains open, letting in a host of pleasant, happy thoughts. That is, it will if we take pains to store them away. We cannot get what isn't laid away for us. If we have stored the grudges, the sorrows, the misunderstandings which we have met with—and all of us do meet with these—we shall find our latter years beset with discontent and cynicism, and remembering, we shall grow bitter and unhappy. Isn't it better to try to put those behind us and remember only the days that shine?

Nor do we want to forget others in our memory thoughts. We are all helping others to store away their memories. What are we giving to them? Many a boy or girl has been saved from harm at some critical moment of temptation because of the flash of memory of home days and teachings. Many a friend has been helped over some rough spot in the road because of tender remembrance of some kindness shown. Many a home has been saved from disruption because of the memories which came trooping when discouragement or unfaithfulness caused their destruction. And the reverse is just as absolutely true.

What kind of memories are we giving others? What kind of memories are we storing away in our hearts? Let's build not only for the present but for the future, which will just as surely be ours by and by.
